第3問 次の文を読んで、設問（問34～39）に答えなさい。

Even for people who don't believe in fortune telling, it can be fun to learn about what *fortune-tellers look at on a person's *palm.

To read a person's future, a fortune-teller looks at both of the person's hands. They say <sup>(a)</sup> the hand that a person uses for writing will show the things the person has done in life and the choices he or she has made. Fortune-tellers say the person's other hand will show <sup>(b)</sup> the abilities they were born with and their <sup>(c)</sup> fate.

In looking at each hand, fortune-tellers say that different lines on the hand represent things about a person's life. For example, they call the three major lines on people's hands the *head line, the heart line, and the life line.

The head line represents intelligence—people with a long head line are said to have an excellent memory, while <sup>(d)</sup> those with a short one are very intelligent. The life line represents health, and the longer it is, the healthier someone is. The heart line represents emotions and relationships—as a rule, the longer it is, the more important relationships are to that person.

Fortune-tellers also look at six minor lines, but quite a lot of people do not have one or more of the minor lines. The minor lines are said to represent things such as the person's fate, wealth, health, marriage life, and children. Fortune-tellers read these lines by looking at how deep and how ( e ) each line is.

In addition, fortune-tellers believe they can read information from the fingers of the hand. Each finger has a certain skill or fortune related to it. The thumb is related to love, the index finger to leadership, the middle finger to fate, the ring finger to art and imagination, and the smallest finger to communication. A fortune-teller will look at the length of each finger, how the finger bends, the size of the joints, and the shape of the ends of the fingers.
